

December 13, 2020

Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

And just like that, we're at another Sunday morning. Last week really flew by, and I'm going to guess that this week will be similar. When we were children these December days took forever to arrive, but the older we get, the faster they come. Anticipation for the arrival of Christmas quickens with the added responsibilities of adulthood. The world has waited more than 2000 years for the Savior to return, and we're still waiting. The signs that tell us that Jesus is near seem to be here, but apparently the time has not yet arrived, but I am still anxiously awaiting that day. What a day it was when the King of Kings was born as a baby in Bethlehem, the angels sang, they spoke to shepherds in the fields, the new star shone over the stable where the baby lay. How much more glorious will it be when Christ returns. Yes, as believers we have much to look forward to, and not just in eleven days, but on that last day when Jesus will fix everything and make everything new. This is a great reason to get up and head to church today, to be in fellowship with other believers, and offer God our thanks and praise for sending us His Son, Jesus. Our song choice today is a medley of Christmas Hymns sung by as a flash mob in a mall. Watch it until the end as it gets better as it goes. Peace, mercy, and grace to you from God our Father and our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.