

December 24, 2020

Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

Merry Christmas to you all on this Christmas Eve. Something odd is happening with my post this morning. It seems that every time I get close to the end, some glitch occurs and the post is totally erased. If you were wondering why I'm late today, this is part of that reason. It doesn't matter as much that the post gets out, it matters more that we'll be together in worship today or tonight at either 2, 4, 6, 8, or 10 PM. Pray for the weather to hold off until we've made it safely home tonight. Things will be a little different in this pandemic year, but we're doing everything possible to keep it as close to normal as possible. At least if I can remember what normal used to be. I pray that your Christmas would be a time of blessing and peace and joy. No one can bring us that except the Babe of Bethlehem, and in His glorious name I lift you and yours. Take the time to give praise and thanksgiving where it belongs today, to Jesus our Lord and Savior, in Him we trust. And remember this Christmas, and every Christmas that the best present of all is always Jesus. God bless you all as we celebrate His birthday today and tomorrow. Our Christmas Eve song is called "This is Christmas" by Kutless. It's a great song. So enjoy.