Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

Tw was the day before Thanksgiving, and all through their plans, every body held their breath, not knowing the color they'd land. Would it be yellow, or orange, or gasp, even red. The safest place to be would likely be bed. And Mama in her kerchief, and Dad in his mask, waited impatiently by the TV, for the King to take them to task. You have to close down, you haven't suffered enough, and if you don't obey, a hefty fine you will pay. But Andrew, we've done everything that you ordered, no one in my shop has come down with corona. That's enough politics for one morning. This is for all of you who have done everything you've been asked to do, yet are still being singled out for no good reason. Restaurant owners who are trying to keep their staff working, salon owners who are only taking one customer at a time to keep everyone safe, and everyone else who is important to all of us, but not quite important enough for the leaders in this state, a state of chaos. You are valued, and you all remain in my prayers. Pray for our land, there is strength in numbers. Beginning today, I have designated Wednesday to be Western Wednesday. There are many more Country Western songs out there than there is Contemporary Christian songs, so I will play some of those country songs on Wednesday. You might be surprised to realize that you actually like it. I'm starting off today with a favorite of mine from Rodney Atkins. If you're the father of a daughter or two, then you'll appreciate this more than most, I do. Prayers for you today to stay safe and protected, Amen.
