Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

These daily posts are much more fun when I can laugh and joke about things that are occurring. This week has seen a horrible change in the level of covid cases here. Right now I know of enough people with the virus that I couldn't count them with all of my fingers and toes. Some have died, and there are more who may be close to death due to the coronavirus. My friends, many of you had the idea that this was blown out of proportion, and it would disappear after the election. Clearly, it has not disappeared, but it has gotten much worse. I'm not asking you to hide under your covers, but please stop acting like this is nothing, because it is far from that. Wear your masks, even if you have no fear of catching this virus, do it for others who might be more susceptible to perishing because of it. Pretending to be strong and courageous in the face of this pandemic is not a badge of honor, it doesn't show anyone that you are brave, rather, it illustrates foolishness. Please don't put yourself in a situation where you die from this, or kill someone else who you love. Please join me in praying for those who are now suffering with the virus, and for the families of those who have died, and those who will die from it. I'm praying for all of you to keep you safe and protected, you can do the same for others. You can help by wearing your mask. Our song on this first day of the work week is called "If That Ain't God" by Chris Young. Be sensible today . . . and tomorrow, that way I won't need to add your family to my prayer list as they mourn your loss.
