Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

Yeah, it's official, the calendar may not agree with me but my white lawn and driveway do; winter is here. We'll all wake up and see a "winter wonderland" outside and some of you will think that it's beautiful. Others, like me will look out and see a horrible four letter word called snow. This is the first of many, and I'm already praying for Spring to arrive. It's funny how our perspectives change as we change. When I was a skier I always loved to see snow, now that my back and shoulders no longer allow it, I despise it. Life is like that with many things, we grow, we change, we age, and the things in our lives move with us. Some things stay with us, while other things move out of our lives, some permanently. There has always been one thing constant, one thing unchanging, and that is God. No matter how much we might change, He remains the same. When we are struggling with life, God continues to be our loving, Merciful Heavenly Father. When things are going well, He remains the same. His love and mercy never end, they never go out of style, and His peace is the only peace that is lasting and permanent.

When you look outside today, see the snow as a thing of beauty, a gift that coats the trees and cleanses the roads and sidewalks. God delivers beauty. Just be careful walking on those areas, beauty can be slippery. Have a wonderful Western Wednesday. Our country song today is a Marty Robbins offering called "Big Iron." Enjoy!
