Pastor Green's Daily Encouragement

Today is that day. Christmas vacation ends today for school children. Some return to the classroom, and others to virtual learning. I suppose that this means that Christmas is now officially over. Yes, I know that we'll be in the season of Epiphany, but for the most part, we're finished with the celebration of the birth of Christ. As I've already stated, this is a year that we shouldn't be in a hurry to remove the Baby from the stable. A daily reminder of Jesus is a great thing, because He is our hope for today, and tomorrow. Our only true hope is built upon the Savior Whose death and resurrection won for us the victory over all evil, for all time. Can you think of a better reason to place your trust in Him today? Keep thinking about that and get back to me. Yeah, I already know what your answer is going to be, because He is the only answer. We are now starting to turn our sights toward Lent, and that will be here in just a little more than a month from now. The calendar of the Church doesn't slow down or stop for any of us, and neither does the love of God. It is here for us daily, and it didn't disappoint us today either, He's here, and His mercies are new to all of us. Don't waste your time by placing your faith in the things of this sinful world, place it where it works . . . in Christ the Lord. Our song to begin this magnificent Monday is "What Faith Can Do" by Kutless. Start this school/work week in His name, and with music that praises and glorifies Him, our Messiah, Jesus.
