Good morning everyone! I pray that a terrific Tuesday is in store for you today. Certainly the weather report looks most favorable. My neighbors seem to agree as I've seen some that have been missing since the Fall of 2019. Babies that were born since then are running around already. I wonder what else we've missed during the past year? Get out there today and see for yourself, because this is only March 23rd, and if there is one thing I've learned about Western New York weather it's this, it will lie to you and break your heart. And don't be in a hurry to get your rakes and mowers out yet, you'll probably need your shovels and snow brushes first. Don't be deceived by a few nice days, be patient and we will eventually make it to Spring, but I wouldn't think that it'll be here much before Mother's Day. Sorry, just my observations from all the years here. If you want to put your trust in a sure thing, don't bet on the weather, put your faith and hope and trust in your God Who can control the storms of life. Be still and know that He is God. All good things are coming, they will be here soon, and He will deliver them. Our Tuesday song is sung by Tenth Avenue North, and it is called "Control." Have a most remarkable day in the Love of God.
