Wake up to a marvelous Monday. Actually it's going to be Easter Monday for some, and Dyngus Day for others. Or maybe both. Which ever way you're leaning today, I pray that you don't overdo the Polish food and Krupnik. You'll pay the price tonight and tomorrow if you do. For those of you who have never heard of Krupnik, it is a Polish honey liquor. Different distillers add different spices to it. It's good if you don't drink too much of it. It's good to know that we woke up today with the knowledge that our Savior lives, and because He lives, He has opened the doors of Heaven to all of us. That's why we just spent weeks during Lent preparing for Holy Week and Easter. Every year we are reminded of what Jesus did for us, and how He suffered for us, then on the glorious morning of Easter, we are again shown that the empty tomb of Jesus delivers eternal life to you and me. The time after Easter is now a time for us to live as Jesus lived, with a love and concern for others. If you haven't been in a church for awhile, it's never too late to return, or to begin. A closer relationship with the Lord is always a smart thing to seek, after all, for two thousand years He has been seeking us. Don't hesitate today, He is waiting for your prayer. Our marvelous Monday song is "That Where I Am There You May Also Be" by the late Rich Mullins. Remember, Jesus is right now preparing a place for you in His Father's Kingdom.
