Good morning to everyone! I was planning to call this day the calm before the storm, but it's not real pretty out there now, so that ruins that idea. It doesn't matter, another week of this and it should be clear sailing, well, that's my prayer at least. As far as prayers go, they keep being sent for a myriad of reasons, thanksgiving, prayers for the sick, the bereaved, and hurting, the lost. And today I pray that you are not in any of those groups, but if you are, God is as near as a whispered prayer, do not hesitate to reach out to Him, He is listening. Whatever the remainder of this week brings, God is still with us, and He will guide us through all of the storms of life, never place your hope anywhere other than in Him and in His power to heal, and save. Our song for this Terrific Taco Tuesday is a good one for what the weather will be delivering, and it is called "Praise You in This Storm" by Casting Crowns. Have a most wonderful Spirit filled day, in Jesus' name. Amen.
