OK, time to confess . . . which one of you was praying for or was dreaming of a white Wednesday? Spring officially started a month ago, and people will be scrambling for their snow brushes this morning. It was 80 degrees a couple of weeks ago, and here we are, getting snow that would be better suited for Christmas Eve. God has a sense of humor, that's all that I can figure. He knows that we're actually in a drought right now, so He sent precipitation, just not in the form of rain. He knows our every need, and He provides for them, just not always in the way we're expecting, today is one of those examples. His ways are not our ways, and He understands where we do not. So do not lean on your own understanding. Trust in Him and He will deliver you to a future that is perfect and eternal, and it all begins and ends with His Son, our Savior Jesus. For God so loved the world that He gave His only Son that whoever believes in Him will not perish but will have eternal life. That is His promise to all of us, awaken and live in that promise today. It is white out there, but it is still Western Wednesday on this post. Patsy Cline is singing for us today, and she was "Walkin After Midnight." Have a great day watching the snow melt.
