Top of the morning to you all, welcome to Secular Saturday as well as post number 400. As impossible as this sounds, today is the four hundredth consecutive message that I have been called to post here. It has been an adventure, that is a fact, but I pray that tomorrow will be 401 and we'll continue after that. But it is Saturday, and it would be great if God gave us another day like yesterday. It was a perfect day for almost anything that you cared to do. I had considered staying home and getting some outside work done around the house, but the beauty of the day told me, "No, go for a nice drive and enjoy the day." So that's the voice we listened to, and drove to Sprague's in Portville for Buckwheat pancakes. Ninety-two miles each way and worth every hour of driving and every penny of gas. We have no plans yet for today, and if it is another beautiful day, and I get nothing done outside, well, I'm OK with that. Sometimes it's just a good idea to stop and enjoy all that God has given to us. There is always time for work, but not always time for praising God for His awesome creation. Take some time for the praising today, and every day. I'm taking us back to 1967 for this Secular Saturday song. It was a number 1 song in 67, and still remains there for many people. Enjoy Lulu singing "To Sir With Love." Have a glorious day.
