After a fairly nice weekend, here we are, back to the work week, and back to Winter. The present temperature is 34 degrees, and it may stay that way for awhile today. That's okay with me, I've lived in Western New York long enough to know that I shouldn't put my Winter clothes away until June. This is probably one of the only places in the world where we open our pools in April knowing that we won't be able to swim until June. That's a good look at faith in our lives, we wake to near freezing temps as we hold out hope that it will soon be warm. And we don't worry much about hurricanes and tornadoes in these parts. A tsunami is not much of a concern either. Indeed, we are blessed, and we also live along side vast quantities of fresh water. Yes, God is good, all the time. I pray that your Monday would be a day filled with God's mercy and grace, and His blessings. They never get old, they never get broken, and they never cause us trouble or pain. Be lifted up in those gifts today. While you're at it, take some time to give to God what He deserves today, rather than looking for what we think we need.

Our Song for this Marvelous Monday is "Great Lengths" by PFR. It's a great lesson for all of us today.
