Hi there, it's Tuesday, and I have faith that God will be delivering His gifts to all of us today. It's difficult not to have that faith when I wake up and experience His love and mercy every day. My daily bread will arrive, as well as so much more. When you're asked to stop and count your blessings, that's just a silly saying, because there is no way that you could count them all. You may feel poorly today in body, mind, or spirit, and the blessings are still there, but your pain may obstruct your count . . . count anyway. When life knocks you down, call upon the power of the Lord to help you get back up. Remember that faith is the evidence of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen. I can't see the sun out right now, but I have faith that it will rise later this morning. When there is a new moon we can't see it, but we know that in a few days it will start to appear again. That is faith. I don't know what God is going to provide for me today, but I have faith that His blessings will arrive, because they always do. Learning to have faith is simply learning to trust in God, and in His Son Jesus, and all that He has done to provide us with forgiveness and salvation that will one day lead us all to life eternal and everlasting. My prayer for you today is that you would examine your own faith and see the truth of what God has done and will continue to do for you and yours. Our song today directs our faith to Jesus and it is called "Where There is Faith." It is performed by 4Him. Have a terrific Tuesday in His love and mercy and grace.
