It's going to be a great day, a wonderful Wednesday! That's what I'm telling myself. It may turn out somewhat differently, but I'm heading into the day having faith that the blessings will be many and the problems few. I'm not going to defeat myself with a poor attitude, by giving up before anything bad occurs. No, my prayer for me and for you is that we would all wake up this morning with the idea and the belief that no matter what happens, Jesus will be right there in the middle of everything. He always is, but it helps us to see Him more clearly when we're actually looking for Him. The older I get, the more I seek Him, and the more I find Him. He is our Light in the darkness of this world, and He will illuminate all of our paths, especially the route that brings us home to Him and His Father and Spirit. That is a promise to all of us, not that the sailing will always be easy, but that He will be with us, and He will get us to our eternal destination. Yesterday, I wrote about taking a nap, and I got that opportunity around 3:00 PM. Within 15 minutes I was awakened by the telephone and I was once again offered a great new deal on my car warranty. That was all of the nap I got. But here's hoping that today is different. As it is Western Wednesday, our song for today is from Trace Adkins, and it is called "Every Light in the House is On." Trace does a good job of lighting the way, but it still pales in comparison to how Jesus lights the way.
