Good morning my friends, how was your night? I pray that you got enough sleep, and not just enough, but even more than that. You can get a good night's sleep, or you can get a better night, or even a best night, and we should always strive for the best night. That's a universal rating system for many things, and if you do your homework on appliances, tires, mattresses, you'll find three categories, good, better and best. Often good is what is the most affordable, while best may be out of reach financially. We have been blessed by a Savior Who did not give us good blessings, nor were they better blessings, Jesus gave us His very best. The Savior Who healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, opened the ears of the deaf, made the mute speak, and brought the dead back to life is also the One Who opened the Kingdom of Heaven to all believers. I pray that you're counted among that group. One question we have to answer though is this, are we giving our best in our commitment to Christ? Don't worry, I'm not going to wait for your answer, I already know. I'm frequently guilty as well. Are we doing a good job while getting better? We are not called to be the best, we are called to give our best, and that is my prayer for all of us today, that we would give our best. Our song for this fabulous Friday is "My Prayer for You" by Alisa Turner.
