Hello everyone, today is one of those better late than never days. I was called to church late last night by a neighbor who heard what sounded like an explosion. He also thought that it had damaged our new air-conditioning units. He was half right, one of the fuses at our transformer blew, which would have sounded like an explosion. This caused the generator to come on, and that is pretty loud. Problem is, that was the second time that it happened yesterday. I still had to get out of bed and head over to check it out and call National Grid. Those few hours of sleep loss caused me to sleep through my normal posting time. But here I am, better rested than I would have been at 4:00 AM. I'm also awake and thankful that there was no damage to the sensitive equipment at church. It also reminded me to be thankful that we have a new generator as well. God is so good, all the time. He alone knows where this day is heading, but I know Who is leading me, and I am grateful for His presence and His guidance. So have yourselves a terrific Thursday, in the name that is above all names, Jesus Christ the Lord. Our song for this morning is simply titled "Holy Spirit" and it is performed by Francesca Battistelli.
