

Monday, September 27, 2021

Top of the morning to you on this soggy Monday. Can you believe that it's raining again? It's been a year for rain, but I'm not afraid because it is our God in Heaven Who reigns over all things, including the weather. He promised that there would never be another world wide flood, so rely on His promises, they are always truthful and accurate. The rain cancelled Theo's baseball game Saturday, and it won't get made up, so his season is now over. Nothing left now except . . . you guessed it, soccer. No one scored on their own team Saturday, so that is progress, I guess. I still don't like the game, but I sure love that number 4, the Graham Cracker, so I'll continue to go. We have a Father in Heaven who may not enjoy everything about our lives, but He still loves you and me. I'll rejoice in that knowledge today, and every day. You are in my prayers today and every day, and today I'm especially lifting those of you who are ill, and those who are traveling. Be well, and be safe. Jesus loves you, this I know. God bless you and yours. Our song for this marvelously moist Monday is called "Higher" and it is performed by For All Seasons. Have a super day.