Good morning my friends, I pray that you woke up with a song in your heart. I'm not sure about my heart, but I always wake up with a song in my head. Today was no different as I woke to Gene Pitney singing "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance." I'm never sure how they got there, but they are there. Just one more question that I'll have for my Creator when I meet Him. When I was younger I mistakenly believed that the older I got the more answers I'd have. Now I realize that the older I get, the more questions I have, but I'm confident that they'll be answered one day. It is western Wednesday, and this week is flying right by. Last night's adventures led me to another Graham Cracker soccer game. It was already turning colder at 5:30. And it's pretty chilly right now, almost twelve hours later. Dress warm today. This time of year it's good to dress for any temperatures, because things can change in a moment, be ready. Our country song for today is a rather strange choice because the artist is typically known as a 60's pop star, and member of the Monkees. Yes, Michael Nesmith of Monkees fame sang a country song simply called "Joanne," and it was quite popular in the early 70's. Enjoy, and God's many blessings to you
