

Thursday, September 30, 2021

Good morning everyone. I'm running a little late this morning, not because I was sleeping but because I drove some friends to the airport this morning at 4:30. Apparently I haven't been paying attention to what's happening on the Youngmann, but they have traffic shut down over night in both directions. I entered at Niagara Falls Blvd. but was made to exit at Sheridan Drive and I had to take surface streets the rest of the way. We were stopped for every single light from Sheridan and Harlem to the airport. On the way home they made me exit on Millersport, but they don't tell you that until you've passed the north exit, which means you get off going the wrong way on Millersport. And guess how many lights I was stopped at along the route home? If you guessed every single one, then you would be correct. It must have something to do with God trying to develop patience in me, but I'm failing. Truth be told, I've never met a red light that I liked and it doesn't look like it's going to happen any time soon. In spite of all that, God is so very good to me. He gave me an opportunity to assist someone this morning, and I am grateful for that. We should always rejoice when we are given the chance to be a blessing to someone else. I pray that this post is a blessing to you this morning. Our song for this red light laden Thursday is by the King of Rock n Roll singing about the King of Creation. Here is Elvis Presley singing "If We Never Meet Again."