Prayers for you today that this Sunday would include nothing other than the blessings of God for you and yours. What a wonderful opportunity to pray today, sending all of our requests to God, asking for His forgiveness where we have gone astray. Today we can again pray for His mercy and grace in leading us in His paths. There are so many reasons to pray and an incredible number of things to pray for that some days it is difficult to know where to begin, so always just begin with praying to share with Him your thankfulness for the many blessings that He provides to us. Don't attempt to count those blessings, you'll never get to the end of them. It would also be a great day to attend worship somewhere to offer those prayers to Him in His house. It should never be a great sacrifice to spend an hour a week with Him, especially after He has done so much more for us. Once you're up today, get your prayers moving, and get yourself heading out the door as well. Our Saturday song was taken from Les Miserables, and it was a prayer. Today's song is also from that same musical, and it is also in the form of a prayer. As prayer seems to be my theme this weekend, we will end it with the great Colm Wilkinson singing, "Bring Him Home." Have a super Sunday. God Bills.
