Great morning Everyone. That is my prayer for you, that you will experience a great morning and a wonderful Wednesday. There is nothing stopping us from that, at least not yet. If something or someone messes with this, then turn it over to Jesus and let Him take care of the problems. There is trouble every day in one form or another, and those troubles can slow us down, or stop us altogether, if we let them. I'm suggesting that we don't let them steal our joy, or our happiness. There is enough goodness in our lives to supersede any bad that is sent our way. The goodness of God can never be beaten by the darkness of this world, so place everything onto the back of our Lord and let Him carry it for you. Everything is better with Jesus at the wheel, so change seats and let Him drive today, see what great adventures He takes you on. It is western Wednesday and I pulled out a song by Glen Campbell that I like a lot called "Gentle on My Mind." This rendition is somewhat different because it was recorded live on stage with many of the best country musicians of our generation looking on. Toward the end of the song, Glen plays a guitar solo that mesmerizes his peers, even though two of the best guitar players who ever lived are there in Chet Atkins and Roy Clark. Listen and watch the expressions on the faces when Campbell plays.
