Happy Friday to you! Everyone always seems to be happier on this weekday. And why wouldn't we, it begins our weekend. Yep, Friday always feels nicer. Even though it is better for some, others will be undergoing medical procedures, families will be forced to plan funerals for loved ones. Illnesses will still be harming people. In other words, some of us can be having a wonderful day, but that doesn't hold true for everyone. This is a great reason to be forgiving and less judgmental with people, we never really know what they are dealing with, or how badly they are hurting. A kind word does much more to be a blessing to others than an impatient word does. The next time you are inconvenienced by someone, ask yourself what it is that that person may be dealing with, and your anger with them may just relax and release. God is so very good to us, and His blessings are always new. You may be one of those blessings sent by God to lift someone else up. Don't resist Him, be that blessing. No matter where you go, where you hide, God's love and protection can find you. So don't hide, be the answer to the prayers of someone in need. Our song to kick off this fantastic Friday is "The Long Arm of the Lord," by Wayne Watson. Have a great beginning to your weekend, and if possible, be a giver.
