Welcome to this Thankful Thursday. I was blessed to be able to drive some friends to the airport already this morning. They're on their way to the "Happiest Place on Earth," or so it is said. It was perfect timing too because when I picked them up it was only 38 degrees out. It should be much warmer in Florida. It was beautiful outside yesterday. The colors are finally popping out in the trees. A little later than normal, but beautiful never the less. We've all seen the Fall foliage begin and end in early October, so this is a nice change. Like I said, this is a Thankful Thursday, and the beauty of God's creation is something we should always be thanking Him for. Stop and spend some time counting those blessings today, you won't make it to the end of your list because His mercies are new to us every day, and His love is eternal and everlasting. Seek His face and find your joy in life in Him. Our song for this Thursday is called "Would I Know You Now" by Wayne Watson. Have a great day in God's amazing love.
